

Community Foundation of Mississauga

Guiding Principles

Applications will be evaluated in part based on their ability to demonstrate a commitment to the following principles:

- Impact:
Charitable impact deals specifically with outcomes as opposed to outputs. An output is the amount of something that is produced, for example: # of meals served, or # of individuals reached. An outcome is the way something turns out – the consequences of an action. It is the change that occurred because of a program. Outcomes are about quality of life and substantial change for individuals and tend to be things that are more long-term and permanent. For example, rather than talking about the number of graduates from training program a grantee should discuss how many of those graduates are expected to find work and how many have found work in the past.
- Effectiveness:
This criteria is concerned with evidence from the charities that they are implementing programs informed by research and, ideally, have proven to be successful in the past. If this is the first time the program is being implemented, the charity should demonstrate that the method they are proposing is effective and can produce the intended result. Additionally, the Foundation is seeking evidence that program or project is cost-effective in that it is producing results or impact in a way that is no more expensive than its peers. Finally, we are looking for programs that are measurable and attached to the organization's mission.
- Innovation
Innovation is simply defined as the introduction of something new: a new idea, method or device. Innovation can refer to something new or to a change made to an existing product, idea or field.

For our purposes innovation should be understood as a grantee's attempt to add something new into the way they are addressing an issue. It could also refer to the ways the program or project has historically innovated in order to achieve better outcomes. Innovation could also refer to undertaking new forms of research, study, or data collection in measuring a program for its outcomes or merits
- Accountability
Is concerned with whether or not a charity follows good governance, ethical business practices and communicates with donors, volunteers and stakeholders. Essentially, the Foundation is looking for evidence that the grantee has an independent, volunteer board of directors; audited financials or their equivalent; and is in good standing with the CRA. The Foundation is also looking for evidence of plans or strategies to share success or failure with donors and other stakeholders, the Foundation also places value on strategies and opportunities to share knowledge with peers and the community.

- Efficiency

Project or program efficiency is about how much of the funding being requested is used to deliver mission related outcomes versus how much is being used to cover the overhead and administrative costs of the program/project.

The Community Foundation of Mississauga is proud to be a 360 degree funder of programs and projects; this means that we are able and happy to provide funding to advance the administrative costs for projects. However, the Foundation is still responsible for ensuring that funding is utilized in places where it is able to have the most impact.
